

I live in a city that has very few radio stations. The only political shows I can tune into on the radio are ones which air strictly conservative views with Christian based values. I already have no real outlets to hear a non-biased commentary on any given issue, and I hate this. Please don't make it worse by allowing companies to own even more outlets to spew their biased views into. By allowing these companies more access to buy more outlets, I believe that it would provide an even more narrow outlet for differing views to be expressed. Whether they want to admit it or not, only half of the country is conservative. The other half should be able to hear different views expressed from a multitude of voices. I believe that changing the existing laws to satisfy corporate greed is unconstitutional and undemocratic.
